codeboy's rant

I have a strong dislike for turn-off notices, as opposed to those freaks who enjoy them. It's the only time you can't get through to your utilities company, and coincidentally it seems to be the only time they're not calling you on a daily basis to try and sell you some form of insurance against flaming chimps or gelatinous cartoon hammers. Not even a courtesy call to sign me up for an "Energy Saver" payment plan. Wherein all I need do is give them all of my credit card numbers, Social Security number, and a DNA sample, and in two years my clone will have matured to the point of value in his indentured servitude, and will have also maxed out all of my credit cards; which in no way may be faulted to the power company (Clause 4: Paragraph 14). Still no answer, just that lovely little tune that says, "You'll never get through, no matter how hard you try. Oh yeah, we know where you live too, freeloader." Hmm, they might be upset if I call in a fake gas leak, but at least then I could pay them instead of continuing on with the lightning round of Let's Make A Deal: The Middle Ages Tournament.

"HMMM...HACKING SENSES TINGLING"

Okay, I'm clear 'til next month, they must have mistakenly put the phone back on the hook, suckers. Oh yeah, E3 was a blast. I'm sure you've had your fill of magazine reports on this show but I'll give you my run down just in case. Dreamcast™ by far was the biggest surprise of the show. What little they had for the Japanese release didn't do much for a strong base, but the titles that I saw for the U.S. debut looked incredible. Sega's first party football title was so detailed you could see the stitching on the ball, the type of turf and even the players' expressions. The receiver's eyes follow the ball as the quarterback winces from the hit.

There's also another Coolboarders in the works, but from the original UEP Systems, not 989 Studios. This game controls just like the first—easy flips and spins with choices of mid-air grabs. The graphics, the only thing lacking from the original, have been brought up to date finally, making 1080 Snowboarding look like Steep Slope Sliders. God I love saying that. The Thrill Kill engine even made an appearance, this time attached to the Wu-Tang Clan, tragically. But with the sound down you'll finally be able to play one of the best party games ever. Though unplayable, Spiderman seemed to run much like last year's sleeper hit Tenchu. Lots of smooth motion and stealthy moves, with classic enemies that'll remind you of those old Spiderman cartoons of the 70's. And finally the artists dropped the steroid look and have Spidey looking like a lanky teenager once again. Then there was the Fox booth. Planet Of The Apes! From what they had on the monitor it appears to be using something like the Quake engine, but strictly in third person. Too early at this point to make any judgment on the title but Apes fans will finally have something coming there way after more than two decades. And where there's a game license...

Dangerous Designs

If you received issue #18, you probably noticed that we're running an art contest. We've extended the contest dates to allow you art-crazed gamers enough time to get us your game-related artwork. All entires must be received by 7/17/99 to be entered into the drawing for issue #20. Again, the rules are simple—just send your original, game-related artwork to the address on the back cover and entitle it, "Dangerous Designs #20." One winner will be chosen, who will receive one InterAct DexDrive through the mail! The contest is ongoing throughout the year, so get busy. Thank you. Drive through!

About two months ago, I finally experienced what it was like to play a PlayStation game with a GameShark. I absolutely loved it! So after I returned it to the neighbor (six months later), I realized that I just could not live without one! So, I went over to Electronics Boutique with the intentions of finding a GameShark. By that time, I saw this incredible machine called GameShark Pro. So I bought it, and I absolutely love it!

Remind me not to let you borrow anything of mine. I might forget I owned it in the first place.

Kato's Game Reviews

An unbiased look at what's hot and what's not.

R4 RIDGE RACER TYPE 4

Title: R4 - Ridge Racer Type 4
Developer: Namco
Format: CD
of Players: 1-4
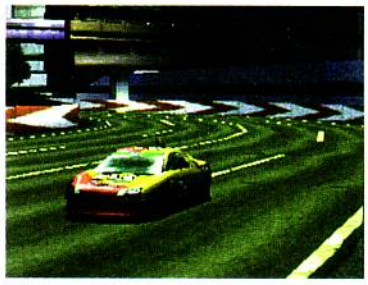
Difficulty: Moderate
Available: Now

I must admit that I was not a fan of the Ridge Racer™ series, but after playing R4™, I have completely changed my view. Although it may not be graphically impressive, R4 has it where it counts.

The control is excellent. Depending on the manufacture of the vehicle, your car will either grip or drift through turns. You want as much control as you can get so your car will follow the proper path through the turn (I found that the drift cars were easier to handle, but that is just my opinion).

Excellent control makes this one of the better racing sims.



Just one of over 320 stunning racers R4 has to offer.

In Grand Prix mode (or story mode depending on how you look at it), your car upgrades depend on the team you join, your car manufacture, and your performance during the races. With over 320 cars to be had, many options are open to you.

One minor problem is that the tracks can get repetitive. The courses do change venues, but there are only a few different routes available on each track. After racing in the Grand Prix mode a couple times, the tracks get old.

Even though this is probably the best racer that has come out on the market recently, Gran Turismo pushed the envelope so far, it still remains to be seen whether or not any other game companies can catch up. And, with Gran Turismo™ 2 and Driver™ looming on the horizon, things can only get better for racing fans.

editor's note

At last, it has arrived. Fresh and hot off the press is Dangerous Waters #19. Can you still smell the ink...can you, CAN YOU? Well, maybe not "hot" off the press. Most likely this issue is late as usual, not unlike all of our past issues. I really don't know who to blame for the tardiness, so I nominate CodeBoy as this issue's scapegoat. This lateness seems to be an ongoing, dare I say, PROBLEM! Well, this is the last straw. I vow, from this issue on, that Dangerous Waters will be on time and without spelling/grammatical errors. OK, you got me, the only thing I can really guarantee is the spelling/grammatical errors part. The timeliness of the magazine is never guaranteed. Now that I think about it, the only thing guaranteed is the fact that you will get an issue, spelling and grammar is not necessarily guaranteed.

Who can stop the evil "Grammatical Menace?" Dan Solo, that's who.

By now I am sure all of you have a GameShark™ Pro (in stores now) and are hacking your pants off. Be sure to check out InterAct's new Hackery discussion board on www.gameshark.com. Just click on the Hackery link if you have questions, comments or tips on hacking. The discussion board has it all for aspiring hackers or seasoned veterans. Heck, don't just go to the Hackery section—check out the entire site. We have completely revamped our website. CodeBoy is still there ranting away, only he's wearing khakis and not bellbottoms.

Thank you for your time, and be sure to: ABUSE THE POWER!

An In-Depth Look At New Devices From InterAct.

Concept 4 Takes The Checkered Flag

Enter a new dimension with InterAct's latest racing wheel.

On the starting line and ready to take your racing sim experience to a "new dimension" is the Concept 4™ Racing Wheel, InterAct's latest racing wheel, and the most realistic one ever made.

What takes the Concept 4 to the front of the pack is its number of realistic features. There are Formula 1-style metal shift levers, a rubberized steering wheel and realistic heel-to-toe foot pedals. The metal shift lever shifts from high to low gear, while the rubber-coated steering wheel provides more grip and control than traditional plastic steering wheels. The completely redesigned foot pedal unit allows you to better control your speed and breaking, so you can drift through winding turns and zip right back into the action on the straight-aways. All of these features combined help to complement gameplay in the more advanced racing sims such as Ridge Racer 4 and Gran Turismo.

In addition to all of the awesome realistic features, InterAct has incorporated its trademark built-in vibration feedback into the Concept 4, allowing you to feel the thrill of wiping out at top speed or racing over rough terrain. Concept 4 is also completely adjustable, with the option to custom create the control pad layout of your choice with its exclusive Button Relocation Function. You can assign a complex button sequence to a single button, keeping your stress level down and your mind focused on blowing by the competition.

Not only is Concept 4 the most realistic wheel out there, it's the only one to give you the power to create your own, custom-made driving experiences. If you're ready to enter a new dimension of racing, grab the keys and get behind the wheel of the Concept 4!

The Concept 4 is the most realistic racing wheel ever made.

Hackers Heaven

Learn How To Hack Like A Pro, From The Pros

Hacking GameShark codes used to be a gamers dream, but now it has become a reality with InterAct's new GameShark™ Pro. The following is a demonstration of "How to Hack like A Pro" by Bryan Black of InterAct Accessories and GSCCC.

Using Castlevania 64™ for the Nintendo® 64, I will teach each and every one of you to hack just like me. First, I made sure the N64 is set up properly. In order to hack codes, you need the 4-Meg RAM Expansion Pak to enable the 'Code Generator' inside the GameShark Pro. Now, I am ready to hack!

Decide what code you want to hack first. Infinite Health sounds good. Turn on the system with the GameShark Pro inserted. Turn the 'Code Generator' option 'ON'. WOW! This version boots a lot faster than the older GameSharks. At this point, the game will begin to load. Once inside the gameplay, notice that the 'health bar' is full. Step number one is to press the GS Button (The button on the GameShark). It will take you to the 'In Game Menu'. Go to the 'Code Generator' option and press 'A'. Your health meter does not have a number to go along with it, therefore the value you're looking for is 'Unknown'. Choose 'Unknown Value Search' with the 'A' button. Doing so brings up a sub-menu. Now, start the search by selecting the 'Start' from the sub-menu with the 'A' button. This takes a short time and the meter increases as searching the systems RAM (Random Access Memory) progresses. Now, you need to modify the health bar in some way. Press the Start Button and it will take you back into the game. Continue to go through the level until you are attacked and the health bar decreases. Upon this occurrence, press the GS Button again. The health bar has gone down since the last time you searched, therefore you want to select 'Less Than Last'. This will search for any values 'Less than the Last' search you performed. At this point there are 1,447,069 code possibilities remaining, OUCH! Do not let this discourage you, this is what hacking is all about!

As expected, you need to narrow down this list of possible codes to find our INFINITE HEALTH code. So your next step would be to go back into the gameplay by pressing the 'Start Button'. Allow your character to get attacked again. Press the GS Button and select 'Less than Last' option, again. The amount of possible codes is still very high and we need to narrow down the list yet again. The easiest way to do this is to use an 'Equal To Last' search. At this point press START and go back into the gameplay. Without losing any health, press the GS Button to get back to the 'Unknown Value Search' menu. Run the 'Equal To Last' search by pressing the 'A' button on that option. You should now have around 28,517 possibilities. That amount is still not plausible to search through. Repeat the 'Less Than Last' search 3-5 more times. Now, your possibilities should be around a reasonable amount to work with (around 64 possibilities).

Not Enough Codes!?!

Check out our back log of PlayStation and Nintendo 64 codes at www.gameshark.com

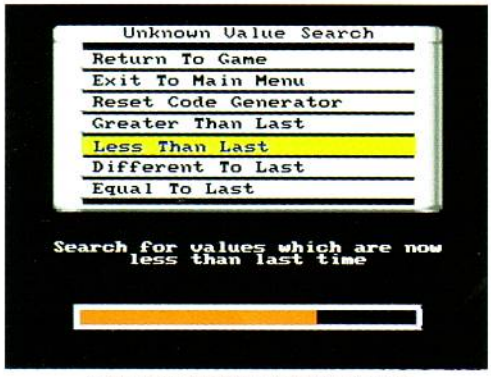
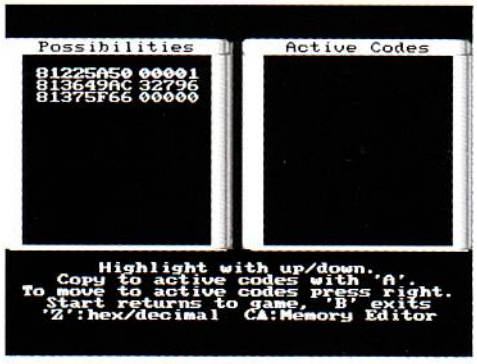
As you can see, it can take some time to find a code, but it's worth it in the end.

Now it's time and search through the list of possibilities to try and isolate this INFINITE HEALTH code. Select the 'View Search Results' option from the 'Code Generator' menu. Most of the correct codes will be mixed with incorrect codes. For example, notice a lot of codes will have the 803XXXXX address on the 'Possibilities' side of the screen. In fact, most of them are in this range. Start to minimize them one by one by highlighting a code that you think may be "the one" and press the 'A' button. This code line will be listed in the 'Active Codes' box. Press START, once the gameplay has begun your health meter will not go down, if you tried the correct code. Alas, if the code you try does not work, you now have 2 choices of what to do. First, you can keep placing different code choices in the 'Active' box until you find the right code. Second, you can continue narrowing down the choices by searching. I recommend continuing the search. By now you know the routine, try performing a 'Less Than Last' search. Eventually, you will find the code that you are looking for OR... pull your hair out.



Health a little low? Perform a "less than last" search

Remember that it takes time to get just one code. Once you have "THE" code in the 'Active Codes' list from the 'View Search Results' menu, write down the code on a piece of paper. Turn the N64 off, wait 1-2 seconds, and then turn it back on. Now, add this code to the GameShark Pro code list. Select 'Select Cheat Codes' from the Main Menu, go to '—- New Game —-' and press 'A'. Once in the New Game option select 'Detect Game'. The Shark enters 'CASTLEVANIA' as the game name for you, how convenient! Your next step is to go to 'Exit & Save' by pressing 'A'. Enter the code by selecting '—- New Code —-'. Type in the description, "infinite health", and select the first line in the code



You can narrow seemingly endless possibilities down to a few.

section, the code(s) that were in the 'Active Codes' list are now small section on the lower right. If you press 'C-Right', it will highlight the first code in this section. Press 'A' on the code in the box, select 'Exit & Save'. The code will now appear in the list under 'New Code'. Be sure "INFINITE HEALTH" is highlighted in GREEN and press 'Start' and choose 'Start Game with Selected Codes' and you are ready to rock!

By now you should be well on your way whoopin' butt and takin' names in Castlevania 64—doesn't it feel good? Thank you, thank you, no applause—just send cash...and major credit cards (sorry, no American Express).
